BREED THEATER.

The Son's Return, Thrilling Biograph Feature.

Commencing today, Manager McNulty will show one of the newest and best motion pictures released lately from the Biograph company. Without doubt the pictures made by this company are the most popular used at the Breed theater, and the very familiar characters are most welcome, regardless of the part they play. In the big picture of the week, entitled The Son's Return, a wonderful story of desperation is told. An ambitious son of poor parents leaves town to make a living in a big city for himself, and being away some time, comes back to his native place, but his parents, driven to desperation by poverty, seeing him displaying his money to his boyhood friends, and not recognizing him, they waylay and rob him and leave him in the bushes unconscious. The lad's sweetheart comes along and seeing this sweetheart comes along and seeing this sweetheart comes along and seeing this er of the schooldays. Meanwhile the desperate parents return to their home and discover to their horror that they have robbed their own son, concluding a gicture that is as thrifling as it is interesting.

ministering.

Miss Grace Alwin, the popular soprano, will sing at every performance her concert and illustrated songs, this week featuring one of Boston's latest hits, while Mr. Ohsley will sing, as qual, one of the popular ministrel bullads that he does so well.

LINCOLN PARK.

Vaudeville at Rustic Theater.

Sunday afternoon's free concert at Lincoln park entertained a good sized and thoroughly satisfied audience. All the cars from this city were crowded and plenty of people came from Poquetanuck and the vicinity, with a good and plenty of people came from Poquetanuck and the vicinity, with a good spirinkling from Westerly.

The five acts which are to hold the boards this week bid fair to delight everybody. Two of them, in particular, are very richly costumed. The Phillips Sisters are exceptionally graceful and platuresque dancers. William Cahill, "The Man from Ireland," is a master of Irish dialect and is understood to be an uncommonly good funmaker of his kind. Lewis and Harr in "Down on the Swanee River" give a fine, humorous picture of old darkey days in Elorida, and they introduce songs, jokes and stories in agreeable profusion. Ada Corbett is clever in her novelty character change. Hawley and Alcott in "Only Married a Week" have been making summer theater crowds laugh for the past six weeks. This week's bill is strong and well arranged, and Lincoln park's patrons are sure to like it.

Two performances a day and dancing afternoon and evening. The 9.50 car, which leaves the park station ten finutes after the last act ends, is due on Franklin square at 10.10.

The Roderick.

The Roderick.

The Roderick.

A most interesting and varied bill of motion pictures and illustrated songs is presented the first three days of this week at the Roderick. An intensely framatic film, entitled Famine in the Forest is the feature subject, and it is a masterpiece of fine photography from one of the leading studios of flurype. The American Biograph company is represented by one of its famous western dramas, which always draw forth rounds of applause. The comply element is well provided by The Crippies Marriage and A Pig in a Poke. Besides the above named subjects there are five others of equal interest.

Mr. Delaney will render the latest waltz ballad entled "It's Hard to Kiss Your Sweeheart When the Last Kiss Means Good-Bye." The Illustrations for this ballad are the best yet.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Is It Non-Sectarian?

'Mr. Editor: It is somewhat interesting to watch the progress of events concerning that "non-sectarian bome" referred to by Mr. C. J. Downes in Tuegday's Bulletin. By the way, does he show anything to prove it is non-sectarian? Of course I refer to the St. John's industrial school project.

First comes the bill incorporating the school. If anyone has doubts as to whether it is intended by the corporators to be sectarian or not let them read over carefully the various sections of the bill and judge for themselves.

sections of the bill and judge for themselves.

Next comes a twin brother of that bill in which judges in our state are allowed to commit boys to any school chartered by the state. St. John's industrial school is not mentioned, for that would point too plainly to the purpose of the bill, but "any school chartered by the state" covers the whole business and appears at first sight innocent and harmless. The fact that the bill failed to pass the senate on Tuesday shows that a majority of the senators considered the bill as fiangerous, to the best interests of the spate, and the surprise came when Senator Lather, the day following, had the bill recalled for the purpose of offering an amendment which relieves the state from paying any of the expense pertaining to the school, and, as he suid, removed his objection to the bill. In my apinion, while his proposed amondment relieves the state from expense it does in no way remove the dangerous tendency of the bill. The danger in passing the bill at all is it was to allow our judges to commit interest of private or sectarian objects. Would this be for the best interests of the state or of the boys committed to such a school? And how would the passage of such a bill affect our state school at Meriden? Our legislators must think carefully about this matter in all its bearings, consider the origin, purpose and effect (if passed) of these bills before voting on their passage. It is often much easier to prevent the passage of a dangerous bill than to remedy the cvil after it becomes a law. The passage of this bill would be but a stepping atone to state aid for parochial schools—and then?
